the use of spell jars can be traced all the way back to ancient times and evidence of rituals that are very similar can be discovered in a wide variety of cultures and traditions one of the earliest examples comes from ancient egypt where magic spells were written on papyrus or pieces of pottery and buried in tombs these items were then discovered centuries later citizens in ancient greece and rome were known to protect themselves by carrying amulets and talismans with them at all times it was also usual practice for them to employ little containers that were stuffed with various herbs and other components during the middle ages in Europe spell jars were known as witch bottles and were used to ward off evil spirits or to curse an enemy. These bottles were typically used to hold urine, hair, and fingernails before being buried on the property of the individual who had performed the spell. In some cases, the bodies were even found buried within the walls of the dwellings or beneath the floors. The use of spell jars in North America can be traced back to the African diaspora and the practice of hoodoo, which is a form of African American folk magic. In hoodoo, the jars are believed to hold the power to cast spells. Hoodoo practitioners produced and used spell jars filled with herbs, roots, and other substances for a variety of purposes, including love spells, money spells, and protection spells.

Modern-day witches are a culmination of the old and new. They travel to the grocery store, work nine to five, and teach in our classrooms. They carry black tourmaline and quartz, wave bay and rosemary bundles over their doorways. Within an ancient sacred practice, a new generation of witches is rising—those who understand the power of action paired with energy and intent, who fight for the best versions of themselves through whispered chants and candlelight, and match their activism with manifestation. The modern witch creates change within the hearth, the heart, and the world, one spell at a time. Frankie Castanea is at the center of a thriving community of modern practitioners who use witchcraft to enrich their lives day to day and improve the world around them. In spells for change, Frankie demonstrates how witchcraft has both personal and worldwide applications, whether it's protecting the home or self from negative energies through boundaries and charms or binding a harmful person to help a friend. Each brings you closer to creating change within yourself, the environment around you, and the society we live in, and closer to a greater awareness of the universe and the energies that exist within it, including studies of meditation, grounding, manifestation, cleansing, protection, banishing, and binding. This book will teach you how to enact personal and global change, from justice spells and banishing unwanted energy to spells to help you on the journey to self-love and self-prioritization. Frankie shows that at its heart, witchcraft is a force for good that is ultimately about refining your identity and reclaiming your power
