Illustrative Example and Data Visualization Consider a typical question Your company has a low ROI despite high sales volume Explain potential causes and suggest corrective actions This question requires a multifaceted response drawing on multiple areas of BSG knowledge

Lets visualize potential causes using a Pareto chart

| Cause                           | Percentage Contribution |
|---------------------------------|-------------------------|
| High Production Costs           | 40                      |
| Ineffective Marketing Campaigns | 30                      |
| Low Pricing Strategy Price Wars | 20                      |
| High Administrative Expenses    | 10                      |

Pareto Chart Illustrating Causes of Low ROI

Insert a Pareto Chart here showing the above data This would be a bar chart with bars descending in height from High Production Costs to High Administrative Expenses with a cumulative percentage line superimposed The chart clearly shows that high production costs and ineffective marketing are the primary contributors to the low ROI

Corrective actions could involve optimizing production processes eg investing in automation improving marketing targeting eg shifting to digital marketing or adjusting pricing strategies eg valuebased pricing instead of price wars

RealWorld Applicability The skills honed in answering BSG Quiz 2 questions translate directly into realworld business scenarios Understanding financial ratios is crucial for financial planning and securing investment Effective marketing strategies are essential for driving sales growth and market share Efficient operations are key to profitability while sound HR practices ensure a productive and motivated workforce Strategic RD investments are vital for longterm
