what does jesus sermon on the mount have in common with the ancient literature of the jewish rabbis much more than most jewish and christian people often realize jesus was addressed as rabbi as were the most devout teachers in the synagogues of his day despite the common values and scriptures shared by these two great religions many christians have little knowledge of the great jewish rabbis who wrote from the time of jesus and the writing of the new testament in the first century to the completion of the talmud in the seventh century young believes this ignorance of the important literature and religious leaders of that period has caused an unnecessary division between the adherents of both religions this volume of essays is concerned with ancient and modern jewish and christian views of the revelation at sinai the theme is highlighted in studies on the dead sea scrolls paul josephus rabbinic literature art and philosophy the contributions demonstrate that sinai as the location of the revelation soon became less significant than the narratives that developed about what happened there those narratives were themselves transformed not least to explain problems regarding the text s plain sense miraculous theophany anthropomorphisms the role of moses and the response of israel were all handled with exegetical skills mustered by each new generation of readers furthermore the content of the revelation especially the covenant was rethought in philosophical political and theological ways this collection of studies is especially useful in showing something of the complexity of how scriptural traditions remain authoritative and lively for those who appeal to them from very different contexts the combined effort of israeli american and european scholars this dictionary reflects the great variety of jewish religious expression from the traditional approaches to such recent variations as reform conservative and reconstructionist judaism the present work consists of five maps of ancient sites known from literary sources and archaeological research and a gazetteer of all the sites the gazetteer contains short descriptions of the sites references to ancient sources and a modern bibliography page v

this book tackles a central problem of comparative religious history proselytizing by jews and pagans in the ancient world and the origins of missions in the early church why did some individuals in the first four centuries of the christian era believe it desirable to persuade outsiders to join their religious group while others did not in this book the author offers a new hypothesis about the origins of christian proselytizing arguing that mission is not an inherent religious instinct that in antiquity it was found only sporadically among jews and pagans and that even christians rarely stressed its importance in the early centuries much of the book focusses on the history of judaism in late antiquity dr goodman makes a detailed and radical re evaluation of the evidence for jewish missionary attitudes in the late second temple and talmudic periods questioning many commonly held assumptions in particular the view that jews proselytized energetically in the first century ce this leads him on to take issue with the common notion that the early christian mission to the gentiles imitated or competed with contemporary jews finally the author puts forward some novel suggestions as to how the jewish background to christianity may nonetheless have contributed to the enthusiastic adoption of universal proselytizing by some followers of jesus in the apostolic age silverman s new book is a comprehensive overview of jewish circumcision throughout history beginning with genesis the author traces paradoxes and tensions in biblical jewish circumcision as seen both within judaism and from the dominant non jewish culture and ends with the current debate over jewish and routine medical circumcision in america this book is essential reading in jewish studies medical sociology and judaic studies theology addresses some of the most burning questions but also provides surveys of contemporary jewish religious life in the various communities and of the attitudes of jewish thinkers to other religious faiths for the first time a comprehensive account of halakhic attitudes towards christianity is presented the differences in jewish mystical thought and that of christianity and other faiths are studied along with the jewish view of the relationship of faith to tradition compared with that of other religions
