rebuilding the ancestral village examines the relationship between one group of singaporean chinese and their ancestral village in fujian china the author explores the reasons why the singaporean chinese continue to maintain ties with their ancestral village and how they use ancestor worship and religion in the ancestral village to reproduce traditional chinese culture some singaporeans report feeling morally obliged to assist in village reconstruction and to support infrastructure developments such as new roads bridges schools and hospitals others have helped with small scale industrial and retail activities for their part officials and villagers in the ancestral home have utilized various strategies to encourage the singaporeans to revisit their ancestral village sustain heritage ties and help enhance the moral economy this ethnographic study examines how two geographically distinct groups of chinese have come together to re establish their lineage and identity through cultural and economic activities this title was first published in 2000 this is a discussion of the relationship between one group of singapore chinese and their ancestral village in fujian in china it explores the various reasons why the singapore chinese continue to want to maintain ties with their ancestral village and how they go about reproducing chinese culture in the form of ancestor worship and religion in the village milieu in china it further explores the reasons why the singapore chinese feel morally obliged to assist their ancestral village in village reconstruction providing financial contributions to infrastructure development such as the buildings of roads bridges schools hospitals and to help with small scale industrial and retail activities related to this is how the village cadres and teenagers through various strategies managed to encourage the singapore chinese to revisit their ancestral village and help with village reconstruction thereby creating a moral economy the main argument here concerns the desire of the singapore chinese to maintain a cultural identity and lineage continuity with their ancestral home ethnographically this anthropological study examines two groups of chinese separated by historical and geographical space and their coming together to re establish their cultural identity through various cultural and economic activities at the theoretical level it seeks to add a new dimension to the study of chinese transnationalism and diaspora studies los llanos the rain leached eastern savannas of war ravaged colombia are among the most brutal environments on earth and an unlikely setting for one of the most hopeful environmental stories ever told here in the late 1960s a young colombian development worker named paolo lugari wondered if the nearly uninhabited infertile llanos could be made livable for his country s growing population he had no idea that nearly four decades later his experiment would be one of the world s most celebrated examples of sustainable living a permanent village called gaviotas in the absence of infrastructure the first gaviotans invented wind turbines to convert mild breezes into energy hand pumps capable of tapping deep sources of water and solar collectors efficient enough to heat and even sterilize drinking water under perennially cloudy llano skies over time the gaviotans experimentation has even restored an ecosystem in the shelter of two million caribbean pines planted as a source of renewable commercial resin a primordial rain forest that once covered the llanos is unexpectedly reestablishing itself colombian author gabriel garcía márquez has called paolo lugari inventor of the world lugari himself has said that gaviotas is not a utopia utopia literally means no place we call gaviotas a topia because it s real relive their story with this special 10th anniversary edition of gaviotas complete with a new afterword by the author describing how gaviotas has survived and progressed over the past decade from start up founders in the chinese equivalent of silicon valley to rural villages experiencing an e commerce boom to middle class women reselling luxury goods the rise of internet based entrepreneurship has affected every part of china for many reinventing oneself as an entrepreneur has appeared to be an appealing way to adapt to a changing economy and society yet in practice digital entrepreneurship has also reinforced traditional chinese ideas about state power labor gender and identity lin zhang explores how the everyday labor of entrepreneurial reinvention is remaking china amid changing geopolitical currents she tells the stories of people from diverse class gender and age backgrounds across rural urban and transnational settings in rich detail providing a multifaceted and ground level view of the twenty first century chinese economy zhang explores the surge in digital entrepreneurialism against the backdrop of global financial crises the u s china trade war and the covid 19 pandemic she argues that the rise of internet based industries and practices has simultaneously empowered and exploited digital entrepreneurs and laborers despite embracing high tech innovation state led entrepreneurialization does not represent a radical break with the past it has provided a means for implementing developmental goals while retaining the importance of the traditional family and generating new inequalities shedding new light on global capitalism and the digital economy by centering a non western perspective the labor of reinvention vividly conveys how the contradictions of entrepreneurialism have played out in china
