history as a social science is arguably more self reflective than associated disciplines in that family other social scientists seem to see little reason to look beyond the paradigm they are developing in the present times historians on the other hand tend to depend on the cumulative process of the development of their craft and the fund of accumulated knowledge yet while this is acknowledged in the practice of research historiography in itself as a subject of study has rarely found its place in the syllabi of indian universities knowledge of historiography is taken for granted when a scholar plunges into research in an attempt to address this lacuna the indian council of historical research ichr has planned a series of volumes on historiography comprising articles by subject specialists commissioned by the ichr the first volume in the series approaches to history essays in indian historiography brings to the readers the first fruits of that endeavour while the essays encompass areas of research presently at the frontiers of new research scholars will also find the bibliographies accompanying the essays of significant appeal the indian american community is one of the fastest growing immigrant communities in the u s unlike previous generations they are marked by a high degree of training as medical doctors engineers scientists and university professors american karma draws on participant observation and in depth interviews to explore how these highly skilled professionals have been inserted into the racial dynamics of american society and transformed into people of color focusing on first generation middle class indians in american suburbia it also sheds light on how these transnational immigrants themselves come to understand and negotiate their identities bhatia forcefully contends that to fully understand migrant identity and cultural formation it is essential that psychologists and others think of selfhood as firmly intertwined with sociocultural factors such as colonialism gender language immigration and race based immigration laws american karma offers a new framework for thinking about the construction of selfhood and identity in the context of immigration this innovative approach advances the field of psychology by incorporating critical issues related to the concept of culture including race power and conflict and will also provide key insights to those in anthropology sociology human development and migrant studies
