from new yorker staff writer and harvard historian jill lepore the dark spellbinding tale of her restless search for the long lost longest book ever written a century old manuscript called the oral history of our time joe gould a madman believed he was the most brilliant historian of the twentieth century so did some of his friends a group of modernist writers and artists that included e e cummings marianne moore william carlos williams john dos passos and ezra pound gould began his life s work before the first world war announcing that he intended to write down nearly everything anyone ever said to him i am trying to preserve as much detail as i can about the normal life of every day people he explained because as a rule history does not deal with such small fry by 1942 when the new yorker published a profile of gould written by the reporter joseph mitchell gould s manuscript had grown to more than nine million words but when gould died in 1957 in a mental hospital the manuscript was nowhere to be found then in 1964 in joe gould s secret a second profile mitchell claimed that the oral history of our time had been all along merely a figment of gould s imagination lepure unpersuaded decided to find out joe gould s teeth is a poe like tale of detection madness and invention digging through archives all over the country lepure unearthed evidence that the oral history of our time did in fact once exist relying on letters scraps and gould s own diaries and notebooks including volumes of his lost manuscript lepure argues that joe gould s real secret had to do with sex and the color line with modernists relationship to the harlem renaissance and above all with gould s terrifying obsession with the african american sculptor augusta savage in ways that even gould himself could not have imagined what gould wrote down really is a history of our time unsettling and ferocious this book examines the history theory and journalistic practice of profile writing profiles and the practice of writing them are of increasing interest to scholars of journalism because conflicts between the interviewer and the subject exemplify the changing nature of journalism itself while the subject often through the medium of their press representative struggles to retain control of the interview space the journalist seeks to subvert it this interesting and multi layered interaction however has rarely been subject to critical scrutiny partly because profiles have traditionally been regarded as public relations exercises or as soft journalism however chapters in this volume reveal not only that profiling has historically taken many different forms but that the idea of the interview as a contested space has applications beyond the subject of celebrated individuals the volume looks at the profile s historical beginnings at the contemporary manufacture of celebrity versus the ordinary at profiling communities countries and movements at profiling the destitute at sporting personalities and finally at profiling and trauma
