what makes an argument in a law case good or bad can legal decisions be justified by purely rational argument or are they ultimately determined by more subjective influences these questions are central to the study of jurisprudence and are thoroughly and critically examined in legal reasoning and legal theory now with a new and up to date foreword its clarity of explanation and argument make this classic legal text readily accessible to lawyers philosophers and any general reader interested in legal processes human reasoning or practical logic this is a revised and extensively rewritten edition of one of the most influential monographs on legal philosophy published in recent years writing in the introduction to the first edition the author characterized anglophone philosophers as being divided and often waver ing between two main philosophical objectives the moral evaluation of law and legal institutions and an account of its actual nature questions of methodology have therefore tended to be sidelined but were bound to surface sooner or later as they have in the later work of ronald dworkin the main purpose of this book is to provide a critical assessment of dworkin s methodological turn away from analytical jurisprudence towards a theory of interpretation and the issues it gives rise to the author argues that the importance of dworkin s interpretative turn is not that it provides a substitute for semantic theories of law a dubious concept but that it provides a new conception of jurisprudence aiming to present itself as a comprehensive rival to the conventionalism manifest in legal positivism furthermore once the interpretative turn is regarded as an overall challenge to conventionalism it is easier to see why it does not confine itself to a critique of method law as interpretation calls into question the main tenets of its positivist rival in substance as well as method the book re examines conventionalism in the light of this interpretative challenge volume the first in a three volume series aims not only to fill that gap but also propose a systematic agenda for future work the editors have selected articles written by leading legal theorists including among others leslie green brian leiter joseph raz ronald dworkin and william twining and organized under four broad categories 1 problems and purposes of legal theory 2 the role of epistemology and semantics in theorising about the nature of law 3 the relation between morality and legal theory and 4 the scope of phenomena a general jurisprudence ought to address this book reconstructs and classifies according to ideal typical models the different positions taken by the major contemporary legal theories as to whether and how law relates to politics it presents a possible explanation as to why different legal theories though often reaching diametric results somehow must still begin from common basic points this book intends to help understand and apply principles and rules better its target is to keep the distinction between principles and rules whereas structuring it on different foundations than those jurisprudence ordinarily employs the first object of investigation is the phenomenon of interpretation in law in order to understand that the classification of certain normative species as either principles or rules depends in the first place on axiological connections that are not ready prior to the interpretation process that unveils them then a definition of principles is proposed aiming to understand what their unique characteristics are when compared to other norms of the legal order thirdly the conditions for the application of principles and rules are examined which are the normative applicative postulates it will be shown on one hand that principles not only explicit values but also set forth precise species of behaviors though indirectly on the other hand the creation of conducts by rules is also to be weighed even though the behavior set forth in advance may be overcome depending on the accomplishment of a few requirements that will surpass both the mere praise of values which does not create behaviors and the automatic application of rules a model is proposed to explain the normative species which includes structured weighing on the application process while encompassing substantive criteria of justice in its argument through the analytical reconstruction of the concrete use of normative postulates especially those of reasonableness and proportionality all of that is done with a focus on the ability of intersubjective control of the argumentation which often degenerates into capricious decisionism
