the authors of this work argue strongly that the decentralization that has taken place in china over the past two decades threatens to undermine the future of reform and perhaps even the state itself they contend that reform has undermined state capacity in china and that the state's fiscal revenues as a percentage of gnp have declined and will continue to decline into the foreseeable future thereby weakening china's ability to mobilize resources for modernization

the book provides a unique examination of the relationship between the state and market in china's economic development over several centuries its analysis is situated in the wider context of debates about technical progress in the pre modern world about the impact of western imperialism about the role of the state in the economic development of poor countries and in the transition of former communist countries away from stalinist systems of political economy this book takes readers on a unique journey across some of the most debated implications of the rise of the chinese economy on the global scene from the analysis suggestions emerge on how to improve statistical tools to measure performance and to obtain more precise macroeconomic forecasts moreover it confirms the suspicion that a governance model of firms that does not sufficiently encourage market competition may have significant costs in terms of efficiency for the chinese production system the analysis of demographic factors and of household savings gives further support to calls for a serious reform effort particularly of the pension and health care systems to utilize households savings more efficiently and equitably finally the analyses of chinese and global trade underscore the need for a less superficial consideration of the implications of the chinese presence in global markets
