this volume deals with core issues in figurative language and figurative thought it also explores areas of convergence between idealised cognitive models and language across fourteen european and non european languages croatian english german greek italian japanese persian polish russian old saxon sicilian spanish swedish and turkish the collection foregrounds the relationship that holds between literalness and figurativeness in meaning construction it emphasises the role of conceptual metonymy and metaphor as the main cognitive tools at work in inferential activity and as generators of discourse ties and it also depicts the import of cognitive models in the production and interpretation of multimodal communication in addition a number of more specific topics are addressed from different perspectives such as language variation and cultural models the argumentative role of metaphor in discourse and the role of empirical work in cognitive linguistics adverbs seem to raise unsolvable issues for theories of word classes both crosslinguistically and language internally the contributions in this volume all address this categorial problem from a variety of formal and functional points of view in the first part current definitions of the class for romance and germanic languages are being questioned and improved drawing on data from english german and italian the second part is devoted to adverbial scope in romance french italian and brazilian portuguese germanic modern greek and chinese under special consideration of modal adverbs subject oriented manner adverbs and domain adverbs and adverbials syntactic and semantic relationships appear to lay the ground for a robust and fine grained functional definition of adverbs and adverbials this book provides an in depth examination of alignment and subject assignment in latin claudia fabrizio challenges the myth of latin as a language defined solely by a nominative accusative alignment system through a comprehensive analysis of a wide range of constructions across the history of the language within a single consistent framework providing extensive data on a range of european languages this book highlights the key role expressivity plays in all language this book explores grammatical gender in the romance languages and dialects and its evolution from latin michele loporcaro investigates the significant diversity found in the romance varieties in this regard he draws on data from the middle ages to the present from all the romance languages and dialects discussing examples from romanian to portuguese and crucially also focusing on less widely studied varieties such as sursilvan neapolitan and asturian the investigation first reveals that several varieties display more complex systems than the binary masculine feminine contrast familiar from modern french or italian moreover it emerges that traditional accounts whereby neuter gender was lost in the spoken latin of the late empire cannot be correct instead the neuter gender underwent a range of different transformations from late latin onwards which are responsible for the different systems that can be observed today across the romance languages the volume provides a detailed description of many of these systems which in turns reveals a wealth of fascinating data such as varieties where husbands are feminine and others where wives are masculine dialects in which nouns overtly mark gender but only in certain syntactic contexts and one romance variety asturian in which it appears that grammatical gender has split into two concurrent systems the volume will appeal to linguists from a range of backgrounds including romance linguistics historical linguistics typology and morphosyntax and is also of relevance to those working in sociology gender studies and psychology the thought of antonio gramsci continues to enjoy widespread appeal in contemporary political and social theory this book draws together some of the world s leading scholars on gramsci to critically explore key ideas debates and themes in his work in an accessible manner relating them to contemporary politics and society every year the bibliography catalogues the most important new publications historiographical monographs and journal articles throughout the world extending from prehistory and ancient history to the most recent contemporary historical studies within the systematic classification according to epoch region and historical discipline works are also listed according to author s name and characteristic keywords in their title
