science has played a crucial role in the initial stages of westerners collecting and studying ancient chinese artworks and archaeological materials the relevant scientific data were quickly generated using progressively sophisticated examination techniques but the task of integrating scientific data with archaeological and art historical resources and developing a workable interdisciplinary study method has lagged behind scientific endeavor part one of this book explores the modes and functions of the scientific resources available and their integration into interdisciplinary study methods and models pre war researchers particularly emphasized that their studies of chinese artistic archaeological materials were scientific improvements in precision and advanced specialization of examining instruments and techniques resulted in substantively more detailed scientific data particularly in the post war period this brought with it new research dimensions and increased knowledge of targeted samples and also greater challenges to the integration of interdisciplinary study in part two meili yang establishes a feasible method of interdisciplinary study in terms of five case studies related to Chinese Song ceramics relevant data are provided and professionally explained resulting in critical new information related to contemporary ceramic technologies this technology information leads us to the recognition of the uniqueness of each single artwork and the artisan's individual intention and critically recognition of the close association with contemporary society and culture at the time of manufacture utilizing this new method of interdisciplinary study modern science ancient technology and art and society are seen to have explicit connections the author not only broadens scholars and readers perspectives regarding ancient ceramic craft but provides a rigorous methodology applicable to interdisciplinary studies across other disciplines how can archaeologists interpret ancient art and images if they do not treat them as symbols or signifiers of identity traditional approaches to the archaeology of art have borrowed from the history of art and the anthropology of art by focusing on iconography meaning communication and identity this puts the archaeology of art at a disadvantage as an understanding of iconography and meaning requires a detailed knowledge of historical or ethnographic context unavailable to many archaeologists rather than playing to archaeology's weaknesses the authors argue that an archaeology of art should instead play to archaeology's strength the material character of archaeological evidence using case studies examining rock art figurines beadwork murals coffin decorations sculpture and architecture from Europe the Americas Asia Australia and North Africa the authors develop an understanding of the affective and effective nature of ancient art and imagery an analysis of a series of material based practices from gesture and improvisation to miniaturisation and gigantism assembly and disassembly and the use of distinctions in colour enable key concepts such as style and meaning to be reimagined as affective practices recasting the archaeology of art as the study of affects offers a new prospectus for the study of ancient art and imagery the publication of this general introduction to the art and archaeology of Korea coincides with the new permanent Korea gallery at the British Museum promoting a wider interest in the country and its history aimed at a non specialist audience this book is readable and well illustrated it and covers a vast time period from the Neolithic c 6000 BC to the present day the remarkable culture of this country gradually unfolds through the descriptions and illustrations of Korean art decorative objects pottery and monuments sculpture crafts and ceramics this collection stemming from the 2nd University of Chester Archaeology Student Conference Archaeo Engage Engaging Communities in Archaeology April 2017 provides original perspectives on public archaeology's current practices and future potentials focusing on art archaeological media strategies and subjects
