written in the form of a diary kept by the cameroonian houseboy toundi this book looks at toundi's innocence and his awe of the white world of his masters

this reference book surveys the richness of postcolonial african literature the volume begins with an introductory essay on postcolonial criticism and african writing then presents alphabetically arranged profiles of some 60 writers including chinua achebe nadine gordimer bessie head doris lessing tsitsi dangarembga tahbar ben jelloun among others each entry includes a brief biography a discussion of major works and themes that appear in the author's writings an overview of the critical response to the author's work and a bibliography of primary and secondary sources these profiles are written by expert contributors and reflect many different perspectives the volume concludes with a selected general bibliography of the most important critical works on postcolonial african literature writing in french in the 1950s ferdinand léopold oyono 1929 2010 had only a brief literary career but his anticolonialist novels are considered classics of twentieth century african literature like oyono's houseboy also available from waveland press this novel fiercely satirizes the false pretenses of european colonial rule in africa meka a village elder has always been loyal to the white man it is with pride that he first hears he is to receive a medal while waiting for the ceremony however meka's pride gives way to skepticism at the same time his wife has realized that the medal is being given to her husband as compensation for the sacrifices they have made the events following the ceremony confirm meka's new estimation of the white man both subtle and oftentimes humorous this beautifully told story lays bare the hollowness of the mission in africa it fuels opportunities for discussing colonial politics around class and race as well as for exploring indigenous cameroon life and values now a firmly established part of world literature course offerings in many general education curricula african literature is no longer housed exclusively with african studies programs and is often studied in english french portuguese women's studies and comparative studies departments this book helps fill the great need for research materials on this topic presenting the best resources available for 300 african writers these writers have been carefully selected to include both well known writers and those less commonly studied yet highly influential they are drawn from both the sub sahara and the maghreb the major geographical regions of africa the study of africa was introduced into the curriculum of institutions of higher learning in the united states in the 1960s when the black consciousness movement in the united states and the cold war and decolonization movements in africa created a need for the systematic study of other regions of the world between 1986 and 1991 three africans won nobel literature prizes soyinka mahfouz and gordimer and the visibility of african writers increased they are now a firmly established part of world literature courses in many general education curricula throughout north america african writers is meant to serve as a resource for introductory material on 300 writers from 39 countries these writers were selected on the basis on two criteria that there is material on them in an easily available reference work and that there is some information of research value on free sites each writer is from the late 19th or 20th century with the notable exception of olaudah equiano an 18th century african whose slave narrative is generally considered the first work of african literature all entries are annotated many teachers of african studies have found novels to be effective assignments in courses in this guide teachers describe their favourite african novels drawn from all over the continent and share their experiences of using them in the classroom scientific essay from the year 2015 in the subject literature africa university of botswana language english abstract this study intends to compare the portrayal of conflict in ferdinand oyono s houseboy and nadine gordimer s july s people specifically it looks at how the black servant is forced to balance the loyalty he has for the white employer and for his african roots the analysis of houseboy will focus on how conflict is represented between whites and blacks how it can satirically have a positive influence on others and lastly how conflict among the blacks can be very destructive houseboy shows how conflict can be prompted by stereotypes how it can be a shield from other pressing concerns and even how conflict itself can provide an outlet for humour the analysis of july s people will on the other hand focus on how people can live together under pretences that they are at peace with one another when in actual fact they are not how the black servant can be in conflict with people of other races or their traditions as well as how that servant can be in conflict with fate or destiny in conclusion it will be shown how houseboy is more explicit in portraying conflict than July's people due to the events that happened in the two texts an argument can be made therefore if conflict experienced by black servants during the colonial period was more in the open as opposed to that of apartheid South Africa

Vol 1 Spring 1970 includes a bibliography of American doctoral dissertations on African literature compiled by Nancy J. Schmidt Independence generated the promise of a better future for the ethnically diverse populations of African countries but during the past thirty years economic and political crises have called into question the legitimacy of speaking about nationhood in Africa. Richard Bjornson argues here that a national consciousness can indeed be seen in the shared systems of references made possible by the emergence of literate cultures by tracing the evolution of literate culture in Cameroon from the colonial period to the present and by examining a broad spectrum of writing in its social, political, economic and cultural contexts. Bjornson shows how the concepts of freedom and identity have become the dominant concerns of the country's writers and he relates those themes to the history of Cameroon as a complex modern state. Bjornson also analyzes in detail works by writers such as Mongo Beti, Ferdinand Oyono, Marcien Towa, Guillaume Oyono Mbida, René Philombe and Francis Bebey.
