in western new mexico in 1905 there rode a notorious outlaw from the mexican border named henry coleman with a colt 45 strapped to his hip coleman alias street hudspeeth from the well to do texas family came to be either despised as a deceitful rustler and ruthless murderer or admired as a man of honor and great courage a popular and charismatic cowman who was fast with a gun no one seemed indifferent in less than a decade coleman who was fluent in spanish and popular with many of the hispanics of the area became as famous in the western part of the state as billy the kid was in lincoln county sheriff elfego baca of socorro county who was careful not to confront coleman referred to him as the last of the bad men of new mexico especially spellbinding are the recollections of how coleman came to be associated with several murders also intriguing is how he died so violently at the hands of a posse of cattlemen in october 1921 from her ranch on largo creek not far from where coleman was said to have committed more than one murder eleanor williams worked hard to interview anyone who had known him or had any knowledge of his daring deeds williams first published coleman s story in the new mexico electric news a monthly electrical co op magazine from 1964 to 1965 award winning historian jerry thompson edited and annotated it with additional historical context also included is a short biography of williams by her daughter helen cress

this work provides a compelling explanation of something that has bedeviled a number of feminist scholars why did popular authors like edna ferber continue to write conventional fiction while living lives that were far from conventional amanda j zink argues that white writers like ferber and willa cather avoided the subject of their own domestic labor by writing about the performance of domestic labor by others showing that american print culture both in novels and through advertisements moved away from portraying women as angels in the house and instead sought to persuade other women to be angels in their houses zink further explores lesser known works such as mexican american cookbooks and essays in indian boarding school magazines to show how women writers dialoging domesticity exemplify the cross cultural encounters between colonial domesticity and sovereign domesticity by situating these interpretations of literature within their historical contexts zink shows how these writers championed and challenged the ideology of domesticity
