one of the marks of being a philosopher is participating in debates about what counts as philosophy of particular note in such debates is the question of how to distinguish philosophy from theology although a variety of answers to this question have been offered in the history of philosophy in recent decades the prominence of christian philosophy has been heralded by many as a genuine triumph over the problematic narrowness of strong foundationalism positivism and scientism for others however it signals that philosophy continues to risk being replaced by confessional theology wherever one comes down on such issues and however one interprets recent trends in philosophy of religion the idea of christian philosophy continues to present pressing questions for those working in meta philosophy epistemology metaphysics hermeneutics and value theory in this volume established scholars representing a variety of cultural traditions religious perspectives and philosophical priorities all wrestle with how the idea of christian philosophy should be understood appropriated and engaged in light of where philosophy is and where it is likely to go the volume includes classical essays that have deeply marked the field and also new essays that explore the relevance of christian philosophy to issues in disability studies engaged pedagogy lived phenomenology the academic study of religion and the workings of social power rather than offer a unified view that seeks to settle things the contributors demonstrate that christian philosophy remains a topic of lively debate wherever one comes down on the issues considered here this volume shows that christian philosophy is neither merely of historical interest nor of interest only to christians but instead remains a thoroughly philosophical topic worthy of serious consideration and substantive critique with a foreword by nicholas wolterstorff noah porter professor emeritus of philosophical theology at yale university senior research fellow in the institute for advanced studies in culture at the university of virginia and honorary professor of australian catholic university winner of the 2017 nautilus silver award this fresh perspective on crucial questions of history identifies the root metaphors that cultures have used to construct meaning in their world it offers a glimpse into the minds of a vast range of different peoples early hunter gatherers and farmers ancient egyptians traditional chinese sages the founders of christianity trail blazers of the scientific revolution and those who constructed our modern consumer society taking the reader on an archaeological exploration of the mind the author an entrepreneur and sustainability leader uses recent findings in cognitive science and systems theory to reveal the hidden layers of values that form today s cultural norms uprooting the tired clichés of the science religion debate he shows how medieval christian rationalism acted as an incubator for scientific thought which in turn shaped our modern vision of the conquest of nature the author probes our current crisis of unsustainability and argues that it is not an inevitable result of human nature but is culturally driven a product of particular mental patterns that could conceivably be reshaped by shining a light on our possible futures the book foresees a coming struggle between two contrasting views of humanity one driving to a technological endgame of artificially enhanced humans the other enabling a sustainable future arising from our intrinsic connectedness with each other and the natural world this struggle it concludes is one in which each of us will play a role through the meaning we choose to forge from the lives we lead
