urbanization is next to global warming the largest threat to biodiversity indeed it is becoming increasingly evident that many bird species get locally extinct as a result of urban development however many bird species benefit from urbanization especially through the abundance of human provided resources and increase in abundance and densities these birds are intriguing to study in relation to its resilience and adaption to urban environments but also in relation to its susceptibility and the potential costs of urban life this research topic consisting of 30 articles one review two meta analyzes and 27 original data papers provides insights into species and population responses to urbanization through diverse lenses including biogeography community ecology behaviour life history evolution and physiology diverse driving forces processes and actors are responsible for different trends in the development of megacities and large urban areas under the dynamics of global change megacities are themselves changing on the one hand they are prone to increasing socio economic vulnerability due to pronounced poverty socio spatial and political fragmentation sometimes with extreme forms of segregation disparities and conflicts on the other hand megacities offer positive potential for global transformation e g minimisation of space consumption highly effective use of resources efficient disaster prevention and health care options if good strategies were developed at present in many megacities and urban areas of the developing world and the emerging economies the quality of life is eroding most of the megacities have grown to unprecedented size and the pace of urbanisation has far exceeded the growth of the necessary infrastructure and services as a result an increasing number of urban dwellers are left without access to basic amenities like clean drinking water fresh air and safe food additionally social inequalities lead to subsequent and significant intra urban health inequalities and unbalanced disease burdens that can trigger conflict and violence between subpopulations the guiding idea of our book lies in a multi and interdisciplinary approach to the complex topic of megacities and urban health that can only be adequately understood when different disciplines share their knowledge and methodological tools to work together we hope that the book will allow readersto deepen their understanding of the complex dynamics of urban and megacity populations through the lens of public health geographical and other research perspectives urban life in transition examines the relationships between economic political and sociological effects of urban life suggesting that political cultural and social changes in city affairs do not occur as a direct result of economic restructuring addressing a gap in the literature which neglects complex issues of urban life and governance this book treats urban crime drugs racism and demographic patterns as topics on their own as well as their impact on local govenment from the mayoralty to the neighbourhood level being urban examines the dynamic interplay between what theoretical perceptions tell us about urban life and how ordinary people interpret and respond to the actual experience of living in cities major focuses are the primacy of social interaction for an understanding of urban life and the strategies people use to create community in environments which many theoris more ts believe promote only alienation and social disintegration this new edition incorporates a strongly interdisciplinary perspective and includes new chapters on significant topics that have received little critical attention in the field capturing a unique historical moment this book examines the changes in urban life since the collapse of the soviet union from an ethnographic perspective thus addressing significant gaps in the literature on cities central asia and post socialism it encompasses tashkent almaty astana and ulan ude four cities with quite different responses to the fall of the soviet union each chapter takes a theme of central significance across this huge geographical terrain addresses it through one city and contextualizes it by reference to the other sites in this volume the structure of the book moves from nostalgia and memories of the soviet past to examine how current changes are being experienced and imagined through the shifting materialities temporalities and political economies of urban life privatization is giving rise to new social geographies while ethnic and religious sensibilities are creating emergent networks of sacred sites but however much ideologies are changing cities also provide a constant lived mnemonic of lost configurations of ideology and practice acting as signposts to bankrupted futures urban life in post soviet asia provides a detailed account of the changing nature of urban life in post soviet asia clearly elucidating the centrality of these urban transformations to citizens understandings of their own socio economic condition this volume examines the dynamic interplay between what theoretical perceptions tell us about urban life and how ordinary people interpret and respond to the actual experience of living in cities major focuses are the primacy of social interaction for an understanding of urban life and the strategies people use to create
