over the last three decades family therapy has revolutionized the mental health field changing the way human problems are conceived and therapy is conducted in concert with the dynamic growth of family therapy the field of family therapy training and supervision has also expanded enormously yielding many new ideas and skills yet until now few books have been devoted to it and no single volume has attempted to relate the full breadth of this growing field in terms of its conceptual and theoretical expansion as well as its practical application handbook of family therapy training and supervision fills this need by presenting a truly comprehensive view of this dynamic area to accomplish this broad yet in depth scope editors liddle breunlin and schwartz have assembled 30 highly acclaimed authorities to author chapters in their respective areas of expertise for further clarification the editors have included segues that introduce and analyze each of the book s four major sections providing the reader with an overview of the section highlights of themes that run through it and discussion of the issues raised in a way that ties the chapters together the book opens with a presentation of the unique and innovative approaches to training and supervision that have evolved in each separate school of family therapy offering a panoramic view of the entire field of family therapy these seven chapters allow for fascinating comparisons among the different schools regarding the process by which ideas about therapy evolve into training techniques and philosophies section ii follows with an explication of the pragmatics of family therapy supervision helping family therapy trainers avoid and anticipate the common mistakes involved with supervision the skills described in this section create an atmosphere conducive to learning and maintaining a working trainer trainee relationship and finally for training of supervisors practical guidelines for using live and video supervision are included section iii features family therapy trainers in such diverse fields as psychiatry psychology family medicine social work nursing free standing and academic family therapy programs who describe the problems and advantages they encounter teaching these new ideas within their idiosyncratic contexts the book closes with a section that includes reflections on the field by such innovative and respected leaders as cloe madanes and jay haley among topics covered are perspectives and recommendations for researchers evaluating family therapy practical advice for incorporating a cultural perspective into training programs feedback on the experience of live supervision from trainees perspectives an appendix follows that provides over 400 references organized by subject for easy reference given the level and scope of this extraordinary text family therapy training and supervision is an invaluable resource for anyone interested in teaching learning or simply appreciating family therapy solution focused brief therapy sfbt is the practice that works by changing concentration from problem behaviour to solution behaviour ideally within just a few sessions this book includes helpful tables questionnaires case studies each chapter is extensively referenced the field of counseling and psychotherapy has for years presented the puzzling spectacle of unabating enthusiasm for forms of treatment whose effectiveness cannot be objectively demonstrated with few exceptions statistical studies have consistently failed to show that any form of psychotherapy is followed by significantly more improvement than would be caused by the mere passage of an equivalent period of time despite this practitioners of various psychotherapeutic schools have remained firmly convinced that their methods are effective many recipients of these forms of treatment also believe that they are being helped the series of investigations reported in this impressive book resolve this paradoxical state of affairs the investigators have overcome two major obstacles to progress in the past lack of agreement on measures of improvement and difficulty of measuring active ingredients of the psychotherapy relationship the inability of therapists of different theoretical persuasions to agree on criteria of improvement has made comparison of the results of different forms of treatment nearly impossible the authors have solved this intractable problem by using a wide range of improvement measures and showing that regardless of measures used in different studies a significantly higher proportion of results favor their hypothesis than disregard it overall this book represented a major advance at the time of its original publication and is of continuing importance the research findings resolve some of the most stubborn research problems in psychotherapy and the training program based on them points the way toward overcoming the shortage of psychotherapists transdiagnostic group therapy training and implementation provides clinicians with a user friendly roadmap for delivering a brief transdiagnostic group therapy that can be used for patients suffering from stress depression anxiety and a range of other related mental health problems this is supplemented by over an hour of training videos hosted on the book's companion website visually demonstrating how to effectively implement the therapy the book introduces the empirical research that has led to a greater emphasis on transdiagnostic treatment approaches and details how to implement each phase of the therapy supported by clinical examples to make practical application easier presents therapy suitable for a variety of mental health problems outlines how to adapt therapy for different patient populations includes method of levels transdiagnostic cognitive therapy features video demonstrations worksheets slides and more on companion website diane waller presents the first theoretical formulation of a model which effectively integrates the change enhancing factors of both group psychotherapy and art therapy drawing on her wide experience as an art psychotherapist and a group therapist she shows how this model works in practice through a series of illustrated case examples of a variety of client and training groups from different societies and cultures the person of the therapist training model presents a model that prepares therapists to make active and purposeful use of who they are personally and professionally in all aspects of the therapeutic process relationship assessment and intervention the authors take a process that seems vague and elusive the self of the therapist work and provide a step by step description of how to conceptualize structure and implement a training program designed to facilitate the creation of effective therapists who are skilled at using their whole selves in their encounters with clients this book looks to make conscious and planned use of a therapist's race gender culture values life experience and in particular personal vulnerabilities and struggles in how he or she relates and works with clients this evidence supported resource is ideal for clinicians supervisors and training programs the book opens a very important debate for the family therapy field at a time of treatment rationing and standard setting it aptly draws our attention to an issue of increasing importance training the highest quality family therapists in addition it offers trainers and supervisors an invaluable howto do it guide to tried and tested methods of taking trainees through a programme of personal and professional development judy hildebrand is known throughout the family therapy world who has always spoken for integrating formal aspects of with personal development and she has designed and run for courses in britain and europe for many years but the picture would be incomplete without understanding the effect that the exercises have on personal development and for this volume she is joined by collette richardson and frankie zimmerman two colleagues and ex trainees who have collated the experiences of a range of trainees from several courses and are able to complement hildebrand's ideas with the voice of the trainee having become aware during his own training of the enormous and varied pressures that students of psychotherapy and counselling have to face often without any real source of support the author seeks to explore the professional and personal difficulties anxieties emotions and pitfalls engendered by this unique and often destabilizing process from what he terms a student's eye view trainees frequently feel overwhelmed by an exhausting round of studying clinical placements supervision and personal therapy and are often engaged in a juggling act between training family and work the fundamental objective of the book is to confront and to ameliorate these demands and difficulties and to highlight the fact that therapy training can and should be an enjoyable and fulfilling process in itself among the many issues looked at are the ways in which training can change us as people how it can affect our personal relationships the dangers of adhering too strictly to theory the terrors of essay writing difficult issues with clients such as unplanned contact and sexuality making the most of supervision personal therapy and many more on training to be a therapist has been designed for use as a standard text on training courses at all levels it is aimed principally at psychotherapy and counselling students but will also appeal to qualified practitioners tutors and supervisors looking for a different perspective
