as a biblical motif new creation resonates throughout the pages of the jewish and christian scriptures and occupies a central place in the apostle paul's vision of the christian life yet the biblical and extra biblical occurrences of this theme vary widely in meaning referring to either a new cosmos a new community or a new individual beginning with the old testament and working through the important texts of second temple judaism moyer v hubbard focuses on how the motif functions in the argument strategy and literary structure of these documents highlighting its role as the solution to the perceived plight he then explores in detail which senses of the term paul intends in galatians 6:15 and 2 corinthians 5:17 concluding that new creation in paul's letters describes the spirit wrought newness of the person in christ and is fundamentally anthropological in orientation

this study explores the relationship between the individual person the self the divine and other people in the writings of the apostle paul and the roman stoic epictetus it does so by examining self involving actions expressed with reflexive pronouns myself yourself etc in various kinds of sentences for example examine yourself and you do not belong to yourself after situating the topic within the fields of linguistics and ancient greek the study then examines the reflexive constructions in epictetus s discourses showing that reflexive texts express fundamental aspects of his ethic of rational self interest in imitation of the indwelling rational deity next the investigation examines the 109 reflexive constructions in paul providing an exegesis of each reflexive text and then synthesizing the results paul s reflexive phrases are essential statements of his theology and ethics expressing an interconnected narrative christology narrative apostolic identity and narrative ethic most importantly the study finds that for epictetus concern for others is a rational means to self realization whereas for paul concern for others is a community ethic grounded in the story of the indwelling christ and is the antithesis of self interest the letter to the romans explains the way paul thought jewish covenantal identity continued now that the messianic era had begun more particularly paul addresses the relevance of abraham for jews and gentiles the role of torah and the way it is contextualized in christ all too often however these topics are read in supersessionist ways this book argues that such readings are unpersuasive it offers instead a post supersessionist perspective in which jewish covenantal identity continues in paul s gospel paul is no destroyer of worlds the aim of this book is to offer a different view of the key interpretive points that lead to supersessionist understandings of paul s most important letter it draws on the findings of those aligned with the paul within judaism paradigm and accents those findings with a light touch from social identity theory when combined these resources help the reader to hear romans afresh in a way that allows both jewish and non jewish existing identities continued relevance
