this book offers an in depth study of the autobiographical writings of four twentieth century writers from north africa assia djebar mouloud feraoun abdelk. bir khatibi and albert memmi as they explore issues of language identity and the individual s relationship to history the book places these writers in a clearly defined theoretical context introducing and contextualising each of the four through the application of postcolonial studies and literary theory on autobiography linked to close textual reading of their works avoiding both psychoanalytical theory and approaches concerned primarily with the writer s testimony value kelly concentrates instead on the poetic and literary qualities of each author s work dwelling on the politics and poetics of identity as well as the ethics and aesthetics of this literature she includes clear discussions of key terms such as postcolonial francophone and autobiography which current academic discourse has rendered very complex and even opaque the book includes a fascinating photograph of two stone tablets inscribed with punic and numidian scripts now held in the british museum which assia djebar writes about at length in one of the texts studied in the book this collection of critical essays celebrates the subversive and challenging creativity of the dada movement born in pacifist zurich in 1916 in violent reaction to the first world war it examines the collective and individual activities that took place under the name of dada in zurich cologne berlin paris new york and barcelona and explores the various creative forms employed including text collage photomontage objects dance performance and film the authors suggest new ways of understanding the work of the most famous dadaists while also casting light on the contribution of hitherto neglected figures far from attempting to reduce dada to a homogeneous movement or to define a unifying principle beneath and beyond the multiple directions taken by dadaists this collection aims to respect the diversity and heterogeneity of the movement s collective activities as well as the specificity of its individual actors the oldest magazine for literary workers consists primarily of brief essays by writers in various fields among these are the poems of nellie sachs the diary of anne frank the poems of the children of thereisenstadt and the writings of elie weisel the author takes eight leading composers of the soviet union shostakovich prokofiev khachaturyan knipper shebalin shaporin kabalevsky and dzerzhinsky and describes their artistic careers mainly from a purely musical standpoint though at the same time showing how in some cases above all that of shostakovich they have been affected by changes in the artistic policy of the soviet government as a non communist the author takes a detached though sympathetic view of soviet musical culture his aim is less to criticize than to give information though criticism is by no means evaded although the book does not pretend to describe the whole vast field of russian music since the revolution its account of representative figures and important compositions with plentiful music type examples conveys perhaps a clearer picture of what soviet musicians are aiming at and achieving than could be obtained from a full and detailed survey involving a discussion of numerous minor figures
