rock of pages provides contexts and close readings of 1980s heavy metal with forty years of hindsight drawing upon analytical frameworks usually associated with literature and literary studies based on decades of work as a professor of literature and as a musician jesse kavadlo analyzes the ways in which 1980s heavy metal aligns with and develops many of the themes prevalent in the canon of literature in doing so the book examines some of the contexts of 1980s heavy metal including cold war the rise of mtv and the formation of the parents music resource center pmrc and subsequent congressional hearings rock of pages takes the pmrc's own objections to heavy metal and uses them as titles and topics to analyze the intersections between heavy metal and literature representations of violence but the connected concerns about justice images of substance abuse and the interrelated issues of obsession madness suicidal ideation sex and love with concomitantly representations of women and relationships between men and women and the references to the occult with the depictions of satan the afterlife and morality on earth itself in doing so the book suggests that 1980s heavy metal displayed more artistry and intelligence than people imagine but that literature is rebellious and subversive as well the anthology decapitation and sacrifice is the result of an interdisciplinary project on the phenomenon of the decapitated head of saint john the baptist in its exegetical context in the material culture of the middle ages and the renaissance and finally in more recent approaches regarding medium studies several specialists and scholars from these fields were invited to share their most recent conclusions thus contributing to our understanding of one of the most peculiar events artifacts and phenomena in west the rise and fall of a male head as subject of martyrdom devotion and artistic expression what emerges from these collected essays is a nuanced understanding of the beheading and presentation of saint john we begin with the biblical account already finding multiple layers of exegetical meaning with a focus on john as a christ figure as the narrative is adapted into other textual and visual forms its symbolism is transformed deepened or extended in new ways relating to medieval and early modern spirituality morality performance and representation what john's disembodied head symbolically embodies shifts as we move from one medium to another and from one geographic region to another and within those broader categories meaningful distinctions can be made between differences in details such as the presence or absence of a platter the use of specific terminology the contents of inscriptions the characterization of herodias and her daughter specifics of stage directions even the parting of john's beard and the portrayal of his eyes as open or closed or half closed to name but a few the close analysis of these and other details that the contributors to this volume provide tell us both about the symbolic potential of john s beheading and about how the textual and visual objects studied here functioned in medieval and early modern communities

Look inside the book in the middle ages: all the services of the church attended by the people were celebrated by daylight except perhaps the first evensong on the eves of saints' feast days. 312 days and very early celebrations, and then the attendants probably brought a taper or a coil of wax light for themselves so that there was no need of provision for the lighting up of the whole interior of churches such as is customary in these days, but lights in churches were a conspicuous part of their furniture and the provision of them was a source of general interest to the people. The deed of manumission begins as is usual in deeds of manumission of that time with a quotation from the Institutes of Justinian: "Whereas at the beginning nature brought forth all men free and afterwards the law of nations placed certain of them under the yoke of servitude, we believe that it is pious and meritorious towards God to manumit them and restore them to the benefit of pristine liberty; therefore the bishop emancipates Nicholas Holden, a native and serf who for many years had served him on his manor of Woodmancote and elsewhere from every chain servitude and servile condition by which he was bound to the bishop and his cathedral and so far as he can to make him a free man."

In God's dispensation and economy the leading ministry is the priesthood. In this universe God has an administration, a divine economy. His economy is the way he arranges or dispenses; therefore it is a kind of dispensation. According to the Bible, there are three main ministries in God's divine dispensation: the priesthood, the kingship, and the prophethood. The priesthood is the leading ministry of the three and brings the kingship and prophethood into function. In other words, both the kingship and the prophethood depend upon the leading ministry of the priesthood.

Written in 1782, the Marquis de Sade's dialogue between a priest and a dying man, Dialogue entre un prêtre et un moribond, is a classic anti-clerical blast of radical atheism expressing the loathing of religion and piety for which Sade was renowned. After a protracted debate, the priest succumbs to an orgy with six nude prostitutes. This special ebook edition also includes Sade's short story of clerical corruption, Retaliation.
